Protecting Against the Coronavirus

At the Whitehead Memorial Museum, we put our patrons first, ensuring your comfort and safety throughout your visit so you can focus on having fun! As we continue to monitor the global Coronavirus outbreak, we are taking every possible precaution to keep our community safe. We will continue working closely with the City of Del Rio and the Office of the Governor to mitigate risks and protect the community.

With recent news revolving around the Coronavirus, we are taking special precautions and ramping up our already robust cleaning and sanitation procedures. We’re increasing the frequency in which we clean and sanitize our exhibits and restrooms throughout the day.

We’re closely adhering to the recommendations and guidelines set forth by the Center for Disease Control (CDC) and the Texas Health and Human Services Department.

What precautions is the Whitehead Memorial Museum taking to prevent the spread of COVID-19?

- The cleaning procedures in place at WMM follow strict internal guidelines as well as the safety guidelines issued by the Centers for Disease Control and the Texas Health and Human Services Department.
- All hands on activities have been removed for your safety.
- The Museum is cleaned and disinfected each day.
- Our staff sanitizes touchable surfaces throughout the day.
- The restrooms are cleaned and maintained by staff throughout the day.
- The entire Museum is thoroughly cleaned and sanitized each Sunday.
